

My wife and I subscribe to XM and are very happy with the product. Stopping XM from providing local traffic and weather would be equivalent to stopping the weather channel from providing local weather on cable TV. Pay radio and pay TV provide a service that broadcast does not, but you have to pay for it. Those that want to pay do so. These companies are not infringing on broadcast's rights. There will always be folks that choose not to pay and will listen to broadcast. Especially if they spend thier energy improving thier product instead of filing petitions.

Gary Kinney